THE chief reason for the uprising against former Prosecutor Alford's fee bill in Hempstead county seems to be the case of Leonard Brown, negro prisoner who was permitted to plead guilty last fall on about nine separate theft charges—resulting in a total fee bill of $450 for the prosecutor in just this one case.

2 Tourists Hurt in Auto Accident

Mother and Daughter, From Ohio, Injured on Fulton Pavement

A mother and her 8-year-old daughter were confined to Josephine hospital Wednesday with injuries sustained in an automobile accident shortly after 6 p. m. Tuesday on the Hope-Fulton highway, eight miles west of this city.

The couple were, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Laiblin and daughter Joan, of Canton, Ohio. Mother and daughter are suffering from lacerations and bruises about the body. Their condition is not believed serious.

They were en route home with Mr. Laiblin from Los Angeles where they witnessed the Tournament of Roses football game.

The accident occurred when they met a car without lights. Mr. Laiblin pulling off the highway to avoid a crash. The rear of his car was struck by the second machine, occupied by several negroes.

The Laiblin automobile plunged into a ditch, overturned twice and landed bottom side up in three feet of water. Mr. Laiblin escaped injury.

Hempstead Judge Declares Alford Over $5,000 Limit

The matter was discussed long and vigorously in last Monday's session of the Hempstead Quorum Court—and today we learn that Judge Stephens has disallowed the entire $1,000 fee balance which Mr. Alford claims is still due him from this county.

The county government is standing technically on the state law which forbids a public official from receiving more than $5,000 in any one year—and Alford appears to be over the limit for both 1933 and 1934.

There may be an argument over whether he has exceeded $5,000 NET, after deduction of expenses, but it appears likely he will have to prove that.

In the meantime, it is cause for congratulation that a county government has for once gone to the pains of inquiring how much a district official has drawn from all the other counties, thus establishing his total salary—a matter on which discreet silence has settled for so many years.

X X X

A member of the Hempstead County Bar offers this solution for a case like the Leonard Brown negro:

When a prisoner pleads guilty the court should refuse to accept the plea until prisoner has had benefit of counsel.

The judge might order some one of the lawyers waiting on the court to spend a few minutes with the prisoner and determine what form his plea should take.

This rule might cost the county $10—but it would, if honestly enforced, prohibit the prosecuting attorney from shaking the county down for guilty-pleas fees aggregating $450 in a single case. The defense counsel would say what his client was prepared to do—and if the prosecutor didn't like it, he would have to go to trial on probably a single charge, with no more profit to him personally than had he accepted a plea of guilty on one count in the beginning.

Meanwhile, the Quorum Court has recommended to the legislature that it destroy the fee system, placing prosecutors on a flat salary.

Eventually this looks to be the safest system for all concerned: Justice, the prisoners, and the public treasury.

X X X

Here is something else for the legislators to do when they convene in Little Rock next Monday:

I find under the state law setting up municipal courts there is a provision that justices of the peace in the township where the court is established shall be paid an extra $25 a year because of their lost justice-trial privileges.

An ordinary justice gets $5 for every day's session of the Quorum Court—but the five DeLeon township justices are paid an extra $25 a year, totaling $125 additional per year against the Hempstead county treasury.

Hempstead county so far is unable to pay its share of the Hope Municipal Court expense.

Perhaps this is the reason—we are so busy paying folks NOT TO DO THINGS that we haven't any money for what is NECESSARY.

Wherever a municipal court is established it must be supported. And see some reason for making this $25-a-year allowance to justices who, when first elected, had expected to reside as magistrates—but two years later, when the municipal court was known to be operating and justices ran in the face of that knowledge, I don't see any reason for continuing this special dispensation.

The legislature ought at least to provide that justices should be forbidden from drawing their money until the municipal court had been paid—for the simple reason that the judiciary is more vital than the legislative branch of local government.

Emmet Negro Held for Knife Attack

Cairo Young Captured Following Wounding of Prescott Watchman

Cairo Young, negro farm tenant of near Emmet, was held in the Nevada county jail at Prescott Wednesday charged with attacking Foy White, side, FERIA watchman, with a knife and rifle headquarters at Prescott Monday.

The negro was captured at his home by Nevada county officers, Horace Hale and John Pruitt.

Young, officers said, attacked Whiteside when the relief officer admonished him to keep in line at the relief office. After slashing Whiteside across the throat, the negro fled.

Whiteside was taken to Cora Donnell hospital where physicians said his condition was serious. Whiteside at one time was constable at Prescott and father under the late Nevada sheriff, Ed Hood.

$1,000 Prosecutor Fee Claim Denied

Hempstead Judge Declares Alford Over $5,000 Limit

Judge Stephens Says Prosecutor's Total Claims $8,230

STILL HIGHER IN 1933

Alford Actually Drew $9,480 That Year, Judge's Survey Shows

Contending Millard Alford, who went out of office as prosecuting attorney for the Eighth judicial district last month, had drawn total fees in five southwest Arkansas counties far in excess of the constitutional limit of $5,000, Hempstead County Judge H. M. Stephens has disallowed $1,000 which Alford claims Hempstead still owes him for 1934, The Star learned today.

Judge Stephens said his investigation through the county clerks of all five counties showed that Alford had filed claims totaling $8,230 last year, and in 1933 he drew in cash approximately $9,480.

Alford's current claim against Hempstead is $1,235, of which $235 has been paid—and against the balance of $1,000 Judge Stephens wrote "disallowed in full."

Year 1933

County	Claim	Paid
Clark	$1,870
Miller	4,260
Nevada	1,940
Hempstead	730
LaFayette (est.)	800
Total 1933	$9,430

Year 1934

County	Claim	Paid
Clark	$2,385	$1,310
Miller	3,155	2,155
Nevada	545	515
Hempstead	1,235	235
LaFayette	910	910
Total	$8,230	$5,155

In addition to the above figures cited by the Hempstead county judge the prosecuting attorney receives from the state $200 flat salary per year.

Officers said they found poison in oatmeal, sausage and milk that had been left on the table.

Gold Devaluation Up to High Court

69 Billions at Stake as Cummings Argues for Government

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The New Deal's battle for validity of President Roosevelt's money policies before the supreme court Wednesday dominated the capital, where the senate and house glowered out into the fringe of the administration's legislative requests.

In the gold case, involving 69 billion dollars, Attorney General Cummings argued that congress was within its constitutional powers forbidding gold payments despite the gold clause contained in virtually all bond and mortgage contracts.

The house took up first the annual supply bill for the fiscal year, and Speaker Byrnes predicted the house would approve the 4-billion lump sum appropriation asked by the president for relief.

The Efficient Kitchen Will Be Described at Cooking School

Miss Jessie Hogue to Open Next Tuesday at Saenger in Star's Seventh Annual Free School

The same intelligence which is applied to the planning of a workshop or a business office may now be used in making the kitchen a better place to work in, according to Miss Jessie Hogue, nationally known authority on foods and economics, who will be presented by this newspaper in the Happy Kitchen Cooking School at the Saenger on Tuesday, January 15, through Friday, January 18.

The old days of drudgery in the kitchen are no more—gone never to return—and what a boon to the housewife! There is something she is able to boast about as being far superior to mother's or grandmother's day!

Women have been known to walk miles in a poorly planned kitchen in the course of a single day. Exercise is, of course, a splendid thing, but the woman who gets her only exercise in the kitchen will find herself a nervous wreck at the end of the day.

So we might say that the old kitchen has had its life lifted, and is keeping step with progressive modern ideas—and the new kitchen has become a delightful workshop, thus doing its bit and adding materially to the progress of this modern age.

Miss Hogue will tell you how all these things are accomplished with the least possible effort when the Happy Kitchen Cooking School comes to Hope, and whether you are a bride of a month, or a grandmother, or just a young housewife, or one of middle age, you'll enjoy these programs on the age old, but deservedly popular theme of cookery.

There are many short-cuts and many roads leading to culinary success and perfection, and the Happy Kitchen Cooking School and this newspaper will show them to you, through the Medium of this nationally known expert. Plan to attend every session. No admission fee and no obligation.

Elevation of 352 Feet the Greatest Between Texas and Missouri

A NEW U. S. SURVEY

14 Engineers Here to Establish Permanent Sea-Level Data

Permanent elevation marks in the vicinity of Hope are being established this week by a crew of 14 federal engineers of the United States Coast and Geodetic survey, C. W. Lyman, surveyor in charge, announced Wednesday.

Elevation marks will also be established along lines connecting Nashville, Texarkana, Gurdon and Stamps. Marks are being set along the Missouri Pacific railway at two-mile intervals. The marks are based on sea-level data, and are accurate to the millimeter, which is less than one-sixth of an inch.

The permanent marks can be used as a guide to future engineers in making various surveys of this section.

Following the floods of 1927 a survey was made along the Missouri Pacific lines which showed that Hope was the highest spot on the Missouri Pacific between Texas and Missouri.

That survey showed:

Texarkana 298.10; Hope 352.10; Prescott 323.10; Arkadelphia 186.10; Benton 297.10; Little Rock 259.10; Newport 227.10; Walnut Ridge 270.10; Corning 289.10.

Thus, Hope is 54 feet higher than Texarkana; 29 feet higher than Prescott; 166 feet higher than Arkadelphia; 55 feet higher than Benton; 92 feet higher than Little Rock; 125 feet higher than Newport; 82 feet higher than Walnut Ridge and 63 feet higher than Corning.

Justice in Freight Rates

A MEASURE creating a freight rate bureau to work with and under the Arkansas Corporation Commission, now being drafted by rate experts and commission members, will be presented to the Arkansas legislature at the coming session. The bill is designed specifically for the handling of all interstate freight rate adjustments, and is the result of a conference called by Governor Futrell for a discussion of the freight rate situation as it affects Arkansas shipping, jobbing and manufacturing, as well as agriculture.

Governor Futrell told the conference he was convinced there is discrimination against Arkansas, expressing the belief that it will be necessary to create a bureau within the jurisdiction of the corporation commission to handle all rate adjustments. It was revealed at the conference that existing Arkansas rates are higher than those to the north and east, added to which there is the competition which Arkansas industry meets in rail and water rates from the manufacturing regions of the north and east to the southwest. Specific instances of discrimination against Arkansas were cited.

One rate expert pointed out that the decline in the number of wholesale establishments in Arkansas from 2052 in 1929 to 1294 in 1934 was traceable to adjustment of rates which made it more attractive to them to be located outside of the state, whence they could undersell wholesalers and jobbers located within the state.

Freight rates are just so much Greek to the average layman, and it will take experts in that line to bring Arkansas back to an equal footing with other regions, and keep the state there: hence the need for a competent state bureau to devote its time and abilities to this particular problem.

Transportation costs figure largely in the successful operation of business institutions, and it would be highly advantageous to Arkansas to obtain adjustments that would benefit institutions already located in the state and bring in new ones.

All Classes Included in Child Delinquency

You will find many varieties of delinquent children. They include those who are not able to hold their own in groups of children; those who are unruly and who refuse to submit to the usual customs of school and community; and those emotionally unstable, who have neurotic tendencies.

When studies are made, it is found that delinquent boys and girls live in general about the public schools. They come from middle-class homes and poor homes, but occasionally from homes of the well-to-do.

On the other hand, when the occupations of their fathers are considered, it is found that delinquent children come more frequently from fathers who are unskilled laborers and who have not themselves approached higher education and the higher professions.

In the main, the proportion of delinquent children from many social-economic class is equal to the proportion of that class in the population.

Although there may be a slight tendency for more children from poorer families than from well-to-do families to become delinquent, the economic picture is not the dominant one in causing delinquency. The questions of heredity and of home conditions are most important.

Broken homes are more prevalent among delinquent children than among children generally. When the home is broken up by the death or desertion of a parent, delinquency is more likely to occur. Forty-nine per cent of delinquent boys and 37 per cent of delinquent girls come from homes in which one or both parents were dead.

In general, public school children are found in only 17 per cent of cases to come from homes in which one or both parents were dead. Homes broken by separation of the parents are also much more prevalent among delinquent children than among public school children generally.

Moreover, these homes are sometimes disturbed in other ways. The mothers of 50 per cent of delinquent girls were found to be employed outside their homes, and the mothers of 43 per cent of such boys were also employed. Roomers lived in 19 per cent of homes of delinquent girls and in 23 per cent of homes of delinquent boys.

the fundamental facts of sex than do children who are in the public schools generally. When parents can observe the amusements of the child, supervise its leisure time and its choice of friends, take care of the question of staying out late at night and look after many other interests of the child concerned in the question of delinquency, they will do much to keep the child from becoming delinquent.

Here's "Barnum" as The Studio Saw It—Screen Play Is Interesting Reading In Book Form

By this time you may have seen the movie, "The Mighty Barnum." Whether you have or have not, however, you might find it very interesting to read the book by the same title, just published, written by Gene Fowler and Bess Meredyth.

Here we have a new experiment in publishing: the presentation of a moving picture scenario, or script—I'm not certain which term is correct—in the form in which it was used in the studio. All the technical terms are here, the studio jargon, the blue print, so to speak, which the director has in front of him as he makes the picture.

Aside from all this, the story is interesting in its own right. It tells about Barnum, how he began as a storekeeper addicted to the purchase of three-headed frogs and such, how he discovered the public's fondness for being humbugged and set out to accommodate it, and how he blundered and stumbled along from triumph to disaster to triumph again.

It gives a good picture of the great showman, and an entertaining view of the life of his time. It is possible, though, to be a little worried about the effect that this publication may have on future writers. Some authors—John Dos Passos, for instance—have already experimented with moving picture technique in the novel. And a flood of others may be feared.

Published by Covici-Friede, this book sells at $2.

YOUR CHILDREN
By Olive Roberts Barton
Children Dislike Being Patronized—Especially When Young They're Very Serious Children are serious people. They do funny things but seldom intend to be funny. I speak mostly here of little children, of course. Humor does become more deliberate as they grow older. But many people do not realize this and adopt a bantering tone toward the small fry. Probably it is because grown-ups don't know how to take them, are really afraid of them, and try to get into their good graces by kidding or other artificial methods. A little girl of four said to the milkman: "What's your name?" Now his name was Mr. Reed. All he had to do was to say, "Mr. Reed." But he winked at her mother and answered, "It's Apple Blumstein."

His Puzzling Joke He had to repeat it several times, but finally she got it. After that she always called him Mr. Blumstein and wondered why he always roared and laughed.

These little episodes aren't very serious in themselves, but in the course of a single day probably a dozen other folk speak to Patsy with a chuckle, as though she were a joke. They either tease her or get her to commit herself so they can laugh.

Mr. Smith sees small Herman making snowballs. He stops and says soberly, "You are wasting snow. Who did you you could waste snow like that? You'd better go and ask your mama."

Herman doesn't go and ask his mother. He doesn't quite know what "waste" means. But Mr. Smith was pretty serious, and the small workman feels that something must be wrong. After a bit he stops musing up the snow in the yard and goes in. The affair is soon forgotten, but for a long time afterward he never touches the snow in the yard without a queer feeling that it isn't quite right somehow. A minute of fun for Mr. Smith—and many minutes of discomfort for the little boy.

Patronizing Always Apparent Another thing grown-ups do unconsciously is to patronize. And patronage is ever apparent in the tone of voice. "Well, well, well," says Miss Jones. "Go you know how to ride a bicycle. Isn't that just simply lovely. My, I wish I had a bicycle like that. You are certainly a great big man, aren't you?"

She means so well and it is nice of her to stop and admire Johnny's new steed and his prowess, too. Perhaps he doesn't notice her voice and effusion, but he can't help feeling that he is just a very little boy being talked down to by a great big lady. Will it build up his pride if all the people he knows speak to him this way?

Billie Can't Explain Sometimes these youngsters stop looking at people, even ones they know well. "What is the matter with Billie? He used to be so friendly, but goes right past me and never speaks any more," says an neighbor.

No one knows, and all Billie will say is that he doesn't like Mrs. So-and-So. He can't explain that she teases him, or makes him feel uncomfortable, or talks to him in a high falsetto that puts him definitely in his place. His disapproval will be instinctive rather than analytical.

How sensible it is to talk to children as though they were human beings. I often wonder if they don't have many a secret laugh at our expense, or feel sorry for us.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

Waves Won't Upset Vacation Coiffure—Can Be Arranged When Hair Is Wet

Straight hair, arranged close to the head, is recommended for girls who expect to vacation in the south. Our leading coiffure experts, realizing swimming plays havoc with curls and waves, have created various flattering coiffures that can be easily combed into place while the head is dripping wet.

Of course, very few women can wear their hair perfectly straight. Nearly everyone needs a suggestion of a wave or a hint of a curl to soften the features and add a certain touch of femininity. If you are lucky enough to look well with your hair straight, by all means wear it that way. If not, get some little curling gadgets to use at home.

If you want to garnish your straight coiffure with a few wavy bangs, buy two or three metal curlers, dampen your hair and put them on while you're dressing. If you want a row of curls across the back of your neck, roll the ends over curlers. Sculptured curls can be wound around a finger, pressed flat against the back of the head and clipped in place with special curl clips.

Here's a coiffure that's easy to fix. Comb your hair straight back from the forehead. Then, placing the comb in front of the right ear, pull it upward so the side section of hair overlaps the section you've just combed straight back. Do the same on the left side. Wave your bangs and, if you like, a small section of hair from bangs to crown of the head. The bang can be left straight or arranged in rows of small curls.

NEXT: Beauty preparations for the south.

AN EDITORIAL BY BRUCE CATTON

The trial of Bruno Hauptmann on the charge of murdering the Lindbergh baby offers the American people a fine chance to refrain from making a spectacle of themselves.

It is by all odds the most notable criminal trial of at least a decade, from the standpoint of public interest. Probably it is true that no crime in this century has so shocked the American people as did this one: certainly there has never been a case in which the ordinary citizen was so anxious to see justice done.

But it would be very easy for us to get pretty sadly mixed up to the exact nature of this "justice" which we hope to see accomplished.

Justice isn't vengeance. It isn't the railroading of a man to prison through a farcical trial. It isn't a public holiday in which mass blood-lust is sated.

It is a chance for us to blow off the accumulated steam of our resentment over an atrocious crime through the spectacle of a man being put to death.

In other words, this trial of Hauptmann wasn't arranged for our collective edification. It isn't a spectacle, and it isn't simply a formality which has to be gone through before the executioner can be summoned.

It is, instead, the highly technical procedure through which society attempts to find out whether a man is guilty of a crime with which he has been charged.

Through the course of many generations, elaborate rules for conduct of this procedure have been devised. Taken by and large, they constitute the best means we have of determining the truth in such cases.

All of which means that it is foolish to form any hard-and-fast opinion as to Hauptmann's guilt or innocence in advance of the trial. It is equally foolish to permit ourselves to be swayed by extraneous sentimental considerations.

If we brood over the tragic fate of Baby Lindbergh and howl for the blood of the first suspect arrested, or if we meditate on the sad plight of Hauptmann's baby and grow maudlin with excessive sympathy for a man accused of murder, we create an atmosphere in which justice is apt to get bogged down in emotion.

In other words—let's take the Hauptmann trial in our stride, without growing unduly excited or raising any barriers in the path of justice.

Prosecution and defense seem to be in capable hands. We might as well relax and let those people who are being paid to do so settle the question.

This ONE THING I BESEECH

By Helen Welshimer
DEAR, through the intervening years
This one thing I beseech:
That we shall always be so near
That either one can reach

ACROSS the sum of little things
That strew the passing days
Sometimes to touch the other's hand
Along our divers ways.

FOR it would bruise the heart too much
If one of us should call
And find the other could not climb
Across a slow-grown wall.

FERA Officers Stabbed by Negro

Pomp Whiteside, Prescott, Severely Cut by Negro From Emmet

PRESCOTT, Ark.—(AP)—His wrath stirred by being denied relief by FERA officials here, a negro farm tenant was said by officers to have severely slashed the throat of Pomp Whiteside, 69, former jailer of Nevada county, and present watchman for the relief office, and fled unapprehended Monday.

Physicians described White's condition as critical and expressed doubt of his recovery.

The negro, described by officers as Cairo Young, 30, tenant farmer near Emmet, had come to the relief office Monday to argue his claim for relief which had been refused by relief officers last week, officers said.

Whiteside, officers said, was slashed when he cautioned the negro to keep his place in line with other applicants for relief.

Response Good in Xmas Seal Sale

Only 150 of 400 Persons Receiving Seals Fail to Make Report

It is a source of the greatest satisfaction to the committee in charge of the 1934 sale of Christmas Health Seals that the response has been so prompt and has evidenced, in most instances, such wholehearted co-operation in this fine enterprise. Out of an approximate 400 persons who received seals this year by mail there yet remain only 150 from whom nothing has been heard. O. A. Graves, Hempstead county chairman of the sale, stated in an interview Wednesday. "This is most gratifying. Many of those unable to buy any seals at this year have returned them with courteous little notes of explanation, in which they expressed their interest and good will with a promise to help as soon as financial conditions are better. A splendid majority has sent money, some retaining their full allotment, others keeping as many as they can afford." Mr. Graves continued. "A complete card index is kept of every name to which seals are sent with the number enclosed or returned. In this way the committee knows exactly who has responded and urges that those who have not already done so act, as they are more than eager to wind up this year's business and 'call it a day'."

Urges Continuation of 3-Cent Postage

Farley Points to Profit Made by Postoffice in Past Year

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Hope for transatlantic air mail service this year was expressed Tuesday by Postmaster General James A. Farley in reporting to President Roosevelt that last year the department made a profit of $12,161,415. He said he hoped more American companies would inaugurate Pacific service and that plans for a transatlantic air transport service would be advanced if not consummated. He recommended that congress provide necessary funds for government aid for these services and also for improved air mail service in Alaska. It is imperative, he said, that the three-cent postage rate, which expires July 1, be continued. A reduction to the old two-cent rate would reduce department revenues by $75,000,000 a year. He said the two-cent local delivery rate cost the department $21,156,499 in revenues during the fiscal year 1933-34. Farley said the surplus of $12,161,415, which he previously had announced, was obtained "without the dismissal of any employee because of decreasing receipts and also without impairment

Will Decide Upon Tourney Location

Young Business Men to Meet Wednesday Night at 8 o'Clock

A decision on whether the Young Business Men's association will launch a drive to obtain $200 to assure this city of the annual District 10 basketball tournament will be reached Wednesday night at a special meeting of the organization at 8 p. m. at city hall. The various business institutions of Hope are urged to have a representative present. Any other individual interested in the association is invited. Members of District 10 will meet in Hope Saturday for the purpose of selecting a place and date for the tournament. Dates and places for holding the district literary events, and the annual spring track and field meet will also be decided here Saturday. Local school authorities have pointed out that a $200 guarantee to take care of expenditures would virtually assure Hope of the tournament. Seating capacity of the high school gymnasium has been enlarged to take care of between 700 and 1,000 spectators, the estimated number of persons that would attend. More than 20 southwest Arkansas towns are included in the district that would send delegations here for the tournament.

Guernsey Looking for More Games

Coach Bristow's Squad Expected to Make Trouble in District 10

Boasting a team that is expected to give members of District 10 plenty of competition, Coach Hugh Bristow of Guernsey is looking for games with all of the strong quintets of this section. Coach Bristow said he believed the Hope High School Bobcats would make the outstanding bid for the district championship with Guernsey giving them a good battle.

of the service to the public in any essential particular. "On the contrary," he added, "the service in many respects was improved. What has been accomplished is largely the result of efficient and loyal service on the part of both executives and employees in the department in Washington and in the field. When this administration took over the operation of the Postoffice Department on March 4, 1933, there was an excess of about 15,000 employees in the service. Since that date due to resignations, deaths, retirements and removals for cause that excess has been practically wiped out. It has been the policy of the department not to fill vacancies thus occurring except when absolutely necessary." The surplus was arrived at by subtracting from the total expenses of the department subsidies to air mail contractors, steamship lines and other expenses which congress authorized to be subtracted in figuring the actual cost of the department.

Health Improves Despite Depression

1933 Death Rate Lowest Ever Recorded in United States

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Public Health Service found Tuesday a bright spot in the depression—that "there is no evidence" the depression has lowered the nation's general level of health. The annual report of Surgeon General Canning credited the "continuation of good health" to the "vast work of the relief agencies" and the fortunate absence of widespread epidemics. The death rate for the calendar year 1933 was placed at 10.5 per 1,000 population and designated the "lowest ever recorded in the United States." Modern invention has brought new health problems, the health service disclosed. "With the greater use of aerial transportation and modern speed of travel, the time of passage from many countries to our shores now falls within the incubation period of many dangerous communicable diseases." There now lows in 1933 death rates were listed by the department: Tuberculosis—59 per 100,000 population, five per cent lower than previous minimum; typhoid fever—3.5, eight per cent lower; diphtheria—3.9, "lowest ever recorded." Only 40 deaths in nearly 7,000 cases of smallpox were reported.

Harmless Spider Kills Deadly One

Notorious "Black Widow" Meets Waterloo in Zoo Test

NEW YORK — (AP) — A specimen of the notorious black widow spider met its Waterloo at the Staten Island zoo Tuesday when it was killed and eaten by a common little house spider. Carol Stryker, director of the Staten Island Zoological Society, said he had been preserving the black widow in a test tube for study and research. He had been feeding it flies and such things, he said, and when he found a house spider in his office he figured that was just so much gravy for the black widow. So he squeezed it a little and tossed it to the man-killer. A few hours later he was astounded to notice that the little commoner had spun a web around the black widow and was complacently licking its mandibles. Further examination showed there was scarcely anything left of Stryker's prized specimen. "This incident suggests," he said, "many theories which may prove of value in combating the spreading menace of the black widow spider. "It may be that some species of harmless spiders are immune to her poison, as it the case with the non-poisonous king snake that can kill the most deadly rattlers without injury from their venom."

events would probably be peculiar, not according to the ordinary logic of life." Colonel Lindbergh testified when Edward J. Reilly, chief defense lawyer, asked him if he did not think it odd that the advertisement Dr. Condon inserted in a Bronx newspaper should be answered so quickly. Native of Bronx Until the kidnapping, Dr. Condon spent little time outside the Bronx.

Born and reared there, he attended City College of New York and became a school teacher.

Over six feet tall, he had an interest in athletics, organized baseball teams and boxing matches among his pupils. He had only recently retired, and except for some lecturing, he spent his time writing letters to the Bronx Home News, playing his piccolo and reading.

Impressed Lindbergh The Lindberghs were impressed by his little homilies, his idealism. He became their emissary. He met the man who had written him the letter, bearing the symbol which had been appended to the original note. He talked to the man "John" in the Bronx cemetery for an hour and 20 minutes, speaking of the man's mother, his faith, the goodness of mankind generally and other kindred subjects. He even saw the man's face when the stranger, at Dr. Condon's request, removed his hat. He told him to call him "Jasfite" in further newspaper communications.

Paid $50,000 Ransom Then he arranged to turn over the ransom money, first being assured the kidnaper could prove he had the baby by sending him the sleeping garment taken from the baby after the kidnapping. While Colonel Lindbergh sat in an automobile nearby, Dr. Condon turned over $50,000 of the $70,000 they had brought.

That was April 1, 1932. With Colonel Lindbergh, he searched for the kidnaper when he realized they had been duped, and then six weeks after the payment of the ransom the baby's body was found, five miles from the Lindbergh home.

Red Johnson Returning NEW YORK — When the Ile de France points her nose westward from Europe Wednesday she will have aboard the flaming-haired Henry (Red) Johnson, the Norwegian sailor who formerly was Betty Gow's sweetheart. The state of New Jersey is bringing back Johnson to testify in the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the baby's murder. Johnson will be ushered to the witness stand in Flemington next week to refute the flood of innuendo, which Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsel for Hauptmann, has unleashed at the Scottish nurse, her boy friend and Violet Sharpe, the maid in the Englewood, N. J., household of Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, who killed herself after the baby's body was found.

May Cause New Attack Johnson, who was told by Betty 24 hours before the kidnapping that the Lindberghs would remain at their Hopewell estate longer than was their custom, and who talked with her over the phone an hour before the crime, looms as a leading objective for a new attack in the defense campaign to prove that the kidnappers had aid from inside the Lindbergh household. But apparently the prosecution confidently expects Johnson to withstand it.

Already the Hauptmann strategists have evinced a tendency to make much of the fact that New Jersey paid $500 of bringing Betty from England to testify while the prosecution failed to produce Johnson. To this innuendo the appearance of Johnson who was found living at Oslo, Norway, as Hendrick Finn Johansen, will provide a dramatic answer.

Due In U. S. Tuesday The Ile de France is due in New York next Tuesday morning, and New Jersey authorities will meet that boat at Quarantine and speed the witness to Flemington.

Johnson left the United States on July 23, 1932 as a deportee on the Norwegian-American liner Tongva, after having been in custody since March 4—three days after the kidnapping.

Actually, he was freed of most of the burden of suspicion after the first few days, but immigration authorities whose custody he was transferred about April 1, continued to detain him for several months longer. At the request of New Jersey authorities, they thought some new development might make his presence advisable.

The tobacco raised in Virginia and exchanged for goods helped the struggling colonists to get a foothold when they came to America.

Later on, it was tobacco that helped to clothe and feed Washington's brave army at Valley Forge.

Today it is tobacco that helps—more than any other commodity raised in this country—to pay the expense of running our Government.

In the fiscal year 1933-34 the Federal Government collected $425,000,000 from the tax on tobacco. Most of this came from cigarettes — six cents tax on every package of ten.

Yes, the cigarette helps a lot—and it certainly gives men and women a lot of pleasure.

Smokers have several reasons for liking Chesterfields. For one thing, Chesterfields are milder. For another thing, they taste better. They Satisfy.

Early Colonial planters shipped hundreds of pounds of tobacco to England in return for goods and supplies.

Sales Tax Looms Up in Tennessee

Liquor Levy Is Proposed to the New Oklahoma Legislature

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(AP)—With a sales tax as the major matter to be considered, the Tennessee legislature began its 75-day biennial session Monday. Indications were that administration support of the gross receipts levy assured its enactment.

The assembly organized with the election of William B. Moss, Jackson lawyer, as speaker of the Senate, a post equivalent to lieutenant governor, and Walter M. Haynes, attorney of Winchester, as speaker of the house.

A house bill proposed a referendum by the people on retention or modification of the state's dry laws, March 5 being set as the date for a statewide election. After the wishes of the electorate are determined, the bill provides that the matter be considered by the legislature.

A number of states adjacent to Tennessee, the bill recited, "have legalized the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors, thereby increasing the difficulty of enforcing the present prohibition statutes in this state and presenting to the people thereof a new question of public policy."

"The Sixty-ninth General Assembly is desirous of ascertaining the views of the voters of this state upon the question of whether or not the present prohibition laws should remain in effect or should be modified."

Gov. Hill McAllister has pledged himself to resist any move to change the prohibition statutes and has been represented in authoritative quarters as being ready to wage a vigorous fight against any liquor legislation.

Oklahoma Liquor Tax.—(AP)—A tax on John Barleycorn loomed Monday night as an answer to the state's perplexing revenue problems.

As incoming legislators prepared for the opening of the 15th regular Oklahoma session Tuesday noon, predictions were freely made that repeal of the state prohibition law would be one of the first major acts of the new body.

A repeal resolution, coupled with a state control proposal, has already been prepared for introduction. It was reported.

On the other hand, reports several of Governor-Elect E. W. Marland's first measures would be among the pet introduced in the house and senate were made Monday.

Big money was involved in the first measure slated to go into the senate hopper Tuesday. It is an act calling for an appropriation of $1,200,000 to take care of unemployables for the remainder of the current year.

Lamb Chop Recipe That's Real Stuff—and It's Good With Pork, Too

BY MARY E. DAGUE
NEA Service Staff Writer

Stuffing lamb chops sounds like gliding the lily—for what is better eating than a platter of juicy, brown, perfectly broiled chops, each in its pretty paper frill, with green peas and French fried potatoes on the side?

Yet, prejudiced as I am in favor of good food simply prepared and served more or less in its natural state, I must admit that there is a lot to be said for stuffed lamb chops. Maybe the thing I like best about them is the onion in the stuffing. Anyway, I like them and here they are:

Stuffed Lamb Chops
Four lamb chops, 1/2 cup minced onion, 2 cups stale bread crumbs, 1 egg, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon butter.

Trim fat from chops and try out. Make a gash half way through meat on side away from bone. Slit almost to the bone and the entire length of the bone. Rub inside pocket thus formed with salt and pepper. Melt butter in a pan and add onion. Cover and cook over a low fire for five minutes. Add bread crumbs which have been squeezed out of cold water. Remove from fire and season with salt and pepper.

Tomorrow's Menu
Breakfast: Chilled cranberry juice, cereal, cream, crisp broiled bacon, lyonnais potatoes, toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon: Stuffed onions, Park-er House rolls, marmalade, apple tapioca pudding with lemon sauce, milk, tea.

Dinner: Stuffed lamb chops, potatoes au gratin, baked cherry pudding, milk, coffee.

pepper. Add egg well beaten and mix lightly. Fill each chop with dressing and place in a hot dripping pan with several tablespoons of the fried oil dripping. Put into hot oven and bake forty-five minutes or until tender. Serve on a hot platter and sprinkle with minced watercress.

Another Oven Chop Recipe
Pork chops are good, too, this way. It will take about an hour for them to cook and at the moment of serving they should be tender and moist, much like well-cooked chicken.

Veal chops take this savory stuffing well, too, and you bake them until tender.

An unusual way to fix chops of almost any kind is to broil lightly on one side, then cover the uncooked side with a thick layer of well-seasoned white sauce to which chopped mushrooms or minced ham and green pepper, or all three, have been added. Sprinkle with stale bread crumbs, dot with butter and bake forty to fifty minutes in a hot oven, depending on the thickness of the chops.

While the oven is on, use the heat to bake the vegetable and dessert. A little planning in this direction makes it possible to effect worth while savings in fuel.

Lovable

BEGIN HERE TODAY
ANN HOLLESTER breaks her engagement to TOMMY BUCKLE. She reads in the paper that TOMMY has been killed in a plane crash. She is heartbroken.

She still loves Tommy and Peter believes he still cares for her. But when chance brings the two together, Peter tells Ann that he never loved her.

They go to Florida and are happy there. Then Peter is recalled home. His family needs him. Ann and Valeria try to make trouble between Ann and Peter.

She succeeds finally and Ann goes away, leaving no trace of her whereabouts.

Peter, desperately in love with her by this time, grows lonelier as the years pass. His efforts to locate Ann are fruitless.

She has found work as governess at the home of MRS. TRACY, an artist. ALLAN VINCENT, Mrs. Tracy's brother, is attentive to Ann. He is determined to win her back, persuade him to hire Allan Vincent to decorate the home he bought for Ann.

Ann leaves the house Allan is decorating belongs to Peter. Convinced that Peter plans to divorce her and marry Valeria soon, Ann leaves the Tracy home. She becomes a clerk in a second-hand book store. From a newspaper she learns that Peter is building a model home for the employees of the Kendall factory.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLII
ANN picked up the newspaper as in a dream. Fearing to take it, dreading what she would see there. Headlines, no doubt, about Peter divorcing a girl named Ann Hollester who had deserted him last spring.

"Gosh! These rich," Sheila said, relinquishing the newspaper. "Think of anybody having money enough to build a town!"

Ann was staring down at the folded pages. Peter's face, his dear, dear face. His eyes, looking sober in this picture. Not too happy looking. Peter was building a town, not divorcing her. Only building a town!

"For goodness' sake, come on! Dinner's getting cold," Sheila complained.

"Go ahead. Don't wait for me." There was a full column and Ann read every word reluctantly laying the newspaper aside at last.

"How queer you look. Excited or something?" Sheila said. "I'm afraid I don't get much kick from the doling of the rich. After all, they don't affect people like us."

"No," Ann said.

"Anyhow, if he does spend millions for people who work in his factories, I've heard he didn't treat his wife right. They said at the store she had to run away from him. He must have been pretty mean for her to leave him, with all that money."

"No," Ann said quickly, rushing to Peter's defense. "He wasn't mean. He was an angel to her."

"How do you know?" Sheila's eyes met Ann's in amazement.

"I knew someone—a girl who knew him."

"She probably checked his hat or something and, because he gave her a dollar, is ready to swear he's a great guy," Sheila said carelessly.

"I'm off to bed," she said after supper. "Put the dishes to soak. I can't help do them after a sale. I told Jimmy I was too tired to see him, so you know how I feel."

"I'm not tired. It was awfully quiet at the shop," Ann said. "Run along. I'll have them done in a minute."

When the dishes were on the shelves, Ann again picked up the newspaper.

She read it all over again. Peter's grandfather had been won over to Peter's plan. Kendallwood would be practically remade. New homes were to be built, a modern library, a moving picture house where the better films would be shown, a gymnasium for men and another for women, a recreation center with tennis courts, a baseball diamond, a swimming pool. A new school house. A clinic.

Tears were rolling down Ann's cheeks. It was a wonderful thing Peter was doing. Bringing beauty, comfort and health to so many people. Ann could close her eyes and see the picture. The pretty, orderly villages springing up on the tractive homes replacing ugly ones.

All the barren plots becoming green and fertile. Children frolicking on the playground, just as Sonny and Sissy had played on their lawn. Harsh, dreary-eyed women, thrilled and proud over their warm, cozy places where fresh curtains hung at the windows. Tired men coming home, not too tired under the new order of things to enjoy recreation or working in their gardens.

"Ann, bring the clock when you come and set it for 7. What in the world are you crying about?"

"Because—because there are some good people in the world," Ann's voice was husky.

Sheila's mouth fell open. "For the love of Mike!" She sat on a stool near the couch, crossed her slim legs, and lifted her dark eyes wonderingly to Ann.

"Can you beat that? I don't call that Kendall fellow good. Ann, it's probably just a big splurge to get in the papers. Maybe an advertising stunt, for all you know. Even if they do build the town it will probably be taken out of the pay envelopes of the people who work there. Anyway, why should we get all hot and bothered about it? It doesn't put cream in your coffee and it doesn't keep my feet from being stepped on."

Ann laughed a little, shakily. "Well, that's an angle."

"Sure, it's an angle. I will say, though, this fellow is good-looking enough to make a girl's heart go thump-thump-thump. Good night and no more weeps!"

When Sheila had gone Ann lay down on the couch. The light from a floor lamp fell upon Peter's picture. An old picture, of course. No one could persuade Peter to have a picture taken now.

"You made a dreadful mistake," Ann said to the picture. "Loving Valeria instead of me. She won't like your factory people. She'll hate you to be building nice, clean houses for them, giving them baths and books. And, after while, she'll pull you away from them because she'll want you to be building tall, monumental buildings of stone and iron instead of little frame houses."

And then, because she couldn't bear thinking such thoughts, Ann said fiercely to herself. "Stop being melodramatic!"

She lifted Peter's picture and laid her lips on his. She had never kissed him. She wished she knew what it was like to be kissed by Peter. But she would never know now.

She went to the window and looked out. Only the harsh outlines of the buildings across the way and the dark Gulf that was ing more important in the world. I'm still sure.—Clara Bow.

HARRY GRAYSON

When a major league magnate tops off a spending spree by buying $5,000 crullers on the line for a kid first sacker, the lady begins to percolate that he's actually out for a winner.

That's how Fowl Crosby, Jr., who angles the Cincinnati Reds, climaxed his efforts of the winter to build up his cellar champs when he bought Johnny Mize, Rochester doorkeeper, from the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Mize price isn't tops for a minor league star, not by many thousand tomatoes, but it was one of the biggest paid in the last three years for a rookie. It shows that Crosby and his skipper mean it when they hint the Reds will be near the top of the heap within three years.

The Red owner has staged a complete about face in his rebuilding policy. Last year he stood a cash shake-down running into five figures and tossed in a bunch of players to acquire such showmen or spavined athletes as Jim Lindsey, Sheriff Blake, Gordon Slade, Wes Schulmerich, Ivy Elviver, his part-season manager, Bob C'Farrell, and others.

Goes After Young Blood
This year Crosby is going in for young blood. Since the sad finish of the 1934 flag scramble, he has written checks for Mize, Leroy Herrmann, Coast League pitcher star, Third Sacker Riggs, Columbus, Outfielder Chapman, Rochester, Catcher Hank Erickson, Rochester, and Catcher Gilly Campbell, Los Angeles.

In addition to this promising sextet, he has snared Shortstop Billy Myers from the Giants, giving up pitcher Allyn Stout and infielder Mark Koenig, neither a great asset in a pennant drive, for the ex-Columbus star; has recalled two great pitching prospects from the Giants, giving up Pitcher Schott; and paid something in excess of $20,000 for Sammy Byrd, formerly known as Babe Ruth's caddy.

A sucker his first year out, Crosby can be regarded as a genuine threat in 1935 if he keeps the rubber off his bankroll and continues to skim the cream off the minor league bowls.

Heldout Howls Near
The plaintive cry of the holdout soon will resound across the land, and one of the loudest wails probably will come from Indianapolis, the habitat of "Charging Chuck" Klein, one of the National League's leading barrier busters until he was taken down with the anemia of the ash in 1934 with the Cubs.

The Hammering Hoosier is due for an appalling slash in salary for 1935. If he avoids scraping out of Cub headquarters he is true. And sundry other members of the Bruin troupe, several of them labeled stallions by Manager Charley Grimm, in his late-season cutback, also are ticketed for pay amputations.

Lean Days for Braves
With Tom Yawkey tossing cash around with mad abandon, and all Boston talking Red Sox, the outlook is dark and dreary for Judge Fuchs, the dog race daller, and his Braves.

Little was done to build up Braves last year and even less has been done to strengthen the creaking machine for 1935. With his stars starting to crack with age, Manager Bill McKechnie faces a Herculean task in trying to get any place in the next campaign.

Only moves made thus far to bolster the team have been the swap for Infielder Joe Coscarart of Seattle, and recall of a group of rookies from the NYP League.

The McKechnie clan is none too strong back of the platter. The infield is shaky. The pitching staff, made up almost wholly of veterans, is well past its peak, with the possible exceptions of Frankhouse and Betts. Rhem, Cantwell, Bob Smith and Brandt are fading, and Mangum

Public Debt Is to Be $270 Per Capita

Roosevelt Forecast Exceeds 1919 Peak by 8-3-4 Billions

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The public debt of $34,238,000,000 by the middle of next year, as forecast Monday by President Roosevelt, amounts to close to $270 for every man, woman and child in the United States.

It exceeds the 1919 total, the post-war peak, by about eight and three-quarters billions.

According to 1933 figures of the League of Nations, England's national debt amounted to $286 per capita, France's to $262, and Italy's to $124.

The entire public debt of the United States, including federal, municipal, county, state and other subdivisions, has not been estimated with any degree of conclusive accuracy by years, but in 1932 the Census Bureau placed the total other than federal at $17,590,000,000. In 1912, the estimate was $2,822,000,000. As the federal debt increased from that point to the war, the rest of the total public debt held an even keel, statistics show, but as the federal burden decreased after the war the other debt increased.
